

reuse the kiln

design & build workshop
atelier mobile aps + Munlab

31 jul —→ 4 aug 2024

Munlab Ecomuseo dell'Argilla is a cultural, collective, non profit project that since 1987 has been taking care of the hundred year old buildings and clay quarry of the local brick factory in the village of Cambiano, 15 km south east of Torino.

Thanks to the activities of Munlab, also the still operating brick factory, - built next to the old one and run by T2D group - and the active quarry take part to the cultural project and are open to the public and the exhausted part of the clay pit has turned into a wild natural area, rich with biodiversity of flora and fauna.

The interaction of contemporary brick production, the access to clay as raw material and Munlab as cultural hub have been driving the attention of artists, designers, educators, students, researchers who became involved in the activities of the ecomuseum. Some of them have their ateliers within Munlab grounds, contributing to a diverse and inspiring community.

atelier mobile aps is a non-profit association running design+build workshops, interactive exhibitions, intercultural spaces, architecture festivals involving communities and craftsmen since 2011.

Within this suggestive framework atelier mobile aps and Munlab organize a workshop oriented to the design and material construction of public-art facilities for the ecomuseum activities and the community.

The goal is to combine the creative reuse of waste material from the production line of the kiln and the public utility of outdoor furniture and devices.

Through a 5-days intensive workshop hosted in the outdoor and indoor locations of Munlab, participants will be immersed in a cooperative experience involving technical and artistic experimentation, shared design and a real construction site. The main material will be clay, in the forms offered by the reuse of 'waste' materials from the T2D brick production line.

Reuse the Kiln is open to a maximum of 15 students or recent graduates from bachelor's, master's and doctoral programs in architecture, design, interior architecture, landscape and engineering.
